„The cowards never started“

I am going to deal with the beginning of a poem's line, which says "The cowards never started".

My opinion is that there are surely other reasons for staying at home than to be a coward.

The first point to my mention is that many people stayed at home because they didn't want to be rich and they liked their life, too. Furthermore, there is a family in their life with maybe little children or old women and they cannot leave them alone at home. If they will take their family with them, it would be really dangerous and maybe they did not want to take these risks. But on the other hand, there are some cowards, too.

As a result I want to say not everybody staying at home is a coward.
